TeleCommunication Systems Introduces Cloud-Based, High-Volume, Messaging Service

Short Message Service Center Platform Enables Rapid, Flexible Utilization and Deployment

Note: Comtech Acquired TCS on 2/23/2016

BARCELONA, Spain, Feb. 26, 2013 /PRNewswire/ -- (Mobile World Congress Booth: 3B15) – TeleCommunication Systems, Inc. (TCS) (NASDAQ: TSYS), a world leader in highly reliable and secure mobile communication technology, today introduced its Cloud Messaging Service, which delivers short message service (SMS) messages over 2G, 3G and LTE networks. TCS' Cloud Messaging Service offers an end-to-end network interoperability with all core components. Because it is hosted in the Cloud, it allows carriers and enterprises to minimize capital expenditures on hardware and software, as well as to reduce operating costs associated with non-stop operation.

News Facts

- | The Cloud Messaging Service sends SMS messages simultaneously over a variety of protocols, such as email, paging, website data and secure messaging with acknowledgement.
- | Manufacturing, healthcare, public safety, educational institutions and other enterprises can utilize this high-volume messaging service to enhance situational awareness and real-time communications.
- | The scalable and redundant platform supports Enhanced Messaging Service, prepaid SMS, premium messaging events (e.g., voting) and embedded promotions.
- | The platform complies with law enforcement requirements, number pooling and wireless number portability.
- | Regardless if messages are P2P (Person-to-Person), P2A (Person-to-Application) or M2M (Machine-to-Machine), TCS offers inter-carrier support and easy integration with enterprise applications.
- | Powering one-third of all U.S. text message traffic and handling more than 700 billion messages per year, TCS has the experience and expertise to deliver carrier-grade messaging services for a variety of uses.
